Evaluating the Treatment of Drug Abuse in the European Union Margareta Nilson 1999

This monograph describes methods, instruments and indicators designed to enhance the evaluation of treatment programs for drug users in the EU. It explores the theory of drug treatment evaluation and how the principles of such evaluation can be applied in practice and made relevant to practitioners. In particular, it demonstrates how evaluation can help policy-makers take informed and appropriate decisions on treatment and help professionals boost the quality, relevance and cost-effectiveness of treatment services.

National Conference on Drug Abuse Prevention Research National Conference on Drug Abuse Research 2018-02-14 Excerpt from National Conference on Drug Abuse Prevention Research: Presentations, Papers, and Recommendations; September 19-20, 1996, Marriot at Metro Center Washington, DC For the past 20 years, the National Institute on Drug Abuse has supported extensive research into the design and testing of theory-based drug abuse prevention interventions that have the potential for effectively addressing one of America's most serious public health problems drug abuse and addiction. At the National Conference on Drug Abuse Prevention Research: Putting Research to Work for the Community, we had the extraordinary opportunity for research and community practitioners to work together to review the research; explore its ramifications for individuals, families, and communities; and develop recommendations for future collaborations and applications of this knowledge in settings across the country.
